Front End Developer
Are you a front-end developer looking for the next challenge? Do you like working in an environment where your work will be noticed throughout the organization? A small team within a recently launched and growing company is looking for a Front End Developer that will own several UIs from start to finish.
Will be responsible for the design, implementation, testing, and deployment of scalable services in a distributed system. This platform provides teams access to intraday and end of day market data from a variety of vendors and exchanges ensuring data is consistent and reliable with the use of a sophisticated validation framework.
A portion of the work will be full-stack/server-side development using Java and Python. This is optional as the focus is primarily front end.

This is a hybrid position and will be onsite at least 2-3 days a week.

Front End Developer Qualifications:
Have designed and built high-performance front-end applications.
Like working a fast paced and growing company with little supervision.
Like being in an environment where your work will be noticed.
To land this opportunity you should have:
Experience successfully delivering software projects into production.
5+ years' experience in frontend development.
UI development experience using React, Redux, and Websockets building high performance UIs.
Experience building services in Python would be a plus.
Financial industry experience nice to have but not required. There are some expectations to mentor and get up to speed with domain knowledge.
